Spain has ordered a submarine built in the United States. It will be Switzerland's turn to order next.

Editor Arthur Howard of The Advance grants the degree of O. K. to Barry's new hotel, as everybody else is doing.

Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts is prepared to buy $100,000 worth of cold water from the Prohibition party.

It is now left for Billy Bryan to start a new republic and elect himself president, vice-president, secretary of state, etc., etc.

In the preparation of the new American note to Germany, Secretary Lansing has a chance to show the stuff he is made of.

Whenever the Turks find themselves hard pressed by the allies on Gallipoli they send out and massacre a few hundred Armenians to get revenge.

Frequent failure by physicians to identify smallpox cases leads to the conviction that a clinic or two on that disease might serve the state of Vermont to good advantage.

The German offer to the United States to use German passenger steamers now interned in American ports in order to transport American citizens is a novel proposal to get German shipping out of bond.

The United States can use that wireless station at Sayville to good advantage by warning vessels at sea of the danger of bombs in their holds. The apparatus will also work in handy on other occasions.

The increased industrial activity in the Estey organ plant at Brattleboro cannot be ascribed to the manufacture of munitions of war. Therefore, the reported boom in the business represents a normal demand and is greatly to be welcomed.

It is scarcely probable that Russia is sending troops to the Dardanelles when she needs every ounce of her available strength to push back the Teutons from her western border. The report may be put down as bad weather vaporizing, or a case of bluffing.

Too prompt bathing in deep water after a hearty meal has taken another victim in Barre. The only safe way is to give the stomach time to perform its functions before a person trusts himself in deep water. Incidentally, it is good policy to help a person who tries out in distress when swimming, because the chances are ten to one that the person is not indulging in a little joke. Only the very young or the very foolish try to perpetrate such a hoax as to swim distress.

Vermont savings banks didn't show a large gain in deposits during the six months ending June 30, the increase being somewhat over $300,000; but the slow growth of the total was easily accounted for because of the fact that the period from Jan. 1 to June 30 covered a time of extreme backwash of business throughout the entire country, which, of course, had its reflex influence on Vermont to a certain extent. From July 1 to the end of the calendar year of 1915 there is likely to be a greater impetus to the deposits in the 37 savings banks of the state.

WILLIAMSTOWN

The funeral of Presby Hopkins, whose death occurred July 7, with held at his late home on Saturday, July 10, Rev. Alvin M. Smith officiating. The bearers were his two sons, Presby W. and Frank E., and two grandsons, Elbert and Claude. There was a profusion of flowers from relatives and friends, bearing silent testimony to the esteem in which the deceased was held. Presby Hopkins was born in Williamstown on Nov. 11, 1826, and was the son of James and Philena (Walcott) Hopkins. He was a life-long resident of the town. On March 3, 1851, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary P. Gile of Stowe, who died a little over eight years ago. He leaves the two sons mentioned above and six grandchildren, Elbert L., Claude E., Ella L. and Glen E. of Williamstown, and Mrs. W. B. Kendrick of Rochester, N. Y., and Mrs. E. L. Fuller of Northfield. There are also two great-grandchildren, Edwin W. Kendrick of Rochester, N. Y., and Pearl G. Fuller of Northfield, and a large circle of nephews and nieces. He also survived by two sisters, Mrs. J. C. Young of Chippewa Falls, Wis., and Miss Betsey Hopkins of this town. Mr. Hopkins was a quiet, unassuming man, who never sought office or the preferment of his townspeople. He was a charter member of the grange at the time of its organization, being associated in the movement with such men as George Denny, H. D. Abbott, John Farnham, Charles Erskine, Henry Erskine and Walter A. Williams. Among those from out of town who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Buck of Berlin, Mrs. J. H. Buck and Mrs. Dana A. Lewis of Monticello, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Harner of St. Johnsbury and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lyon of Northfield.

The strawberry social which was to have been held by the ladies' aid with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Erskine was postponed on account of the rain to Wednesday evening, July 14.

Superintendent and Mrs. Leonard D. Smith and Miss Cora Page are in camp at the Cobb cottage, Caspian lake, Greensboro.

A very enjoyable family gathering was held at the home of Mrs. Sarah C. Seaver on July 9 in honor of her birthday. The guests were Mrs. Julia Blanchard, Mrs. Edward L. House and son of Barre, Mrs. Hattie L. Poor, Mrs. Clyde McAllister and two daughters, Rachel and Ruth, Mrs. E. H. Call, Dorothy and Kenneth Call of Williamstown. The occasion was much enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. W. H. Stewart is the guest of her brother-in-law, C. H. Stewart, at Mirror lake, Berlin, for a few days.

Charles H. Chapman, formerly station agent in this town, spent a part of his vacation here, returning to his present location in Underhill yesterday.

George T. Colby has been "under the weather" for several days past with a combination of gripe and bronchitis, and was obliged to stay in bed for two days last week. He is now somewhat better.

Mr. and Mrs. David C. Gale of Proctor are in town as the guests of Lester O. Morgan, who with his wife, returned to Burlington last Sunday to meet their son, Herbert N. Farnham and family made the trip with the Morgans, going as far as Bolton.

Mrs. Jane O. Williams is with her daughter, Mrs. R. C. Waterman of Barre, who is ill.

Mrs. Thomas D. Poland, who has been out of town on a visit to relatives in Windsor and Springfield, Mass., returned to her home July 9.

Several members of the Salvation Army of Barre were in town last evening and held an open-air meeting in front of the Congregational church. They came in a car driven by George W. Mann, and announced at the end of the meeting that they would come again next week Monday evening at 6:30 and hoped the people of the town would turn out to attend the service.

Mrs. Isaac Recor, who has been the guest of her daughters here and in Barre for the past week, has returned to her home in Chelsea.

The crop of strawberries in town is the largest ever harvested, and the surplus is being sent to dealers in Barre.

Mrs. Mary H. Berry, a teacher in the primary grades in the village schools for several years, is spending her vacation at Northfield with Mrs. C. M. Davis.

O. W. Martin and W. E. Granger, together with their wives, lately took a carriage ride to Brookfield and Randolph, calling on the way on our old townsmen, Maynard R. Spencer, now living on a farm in the western part of Brookfield.

M. Clyde Hutchinson went to Burlington Saturday to enter on his duties as substitute letter carrier in the post-office of that city.

Clarence H. Corlies, proprietor of the Monument house, has lately been on a business trip to the western part of the country, to see if he could either find a customer for the lease of the hotel or suitable help so that he could again open the house for business. He did not meet with success in either direction.

Miss Doris Kanaly of Montpelier returned to her home to-day after a few days' visit to her cousin, Ruth E. Martin.

Miss Emma Martin of Barre has lately spent several days in town as the guest of Albert G. and Gertrude Martin.

Herbert L. Platt and Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Brockway have moved to their farm on south hill, known for a long time as the Luther H. J. Merrill farm.

EVANGELIST GETS WARNING.
From State's Attorney of Rutland County to Desist from Holding Meetings.

Rutland, July 12.—Evangelist B. T. Taylor, known as "Cyclone" and if all the stories told about him and his rambling remarks made in Forestville a few nights ago are true he deserves the title, has returned to Brandon, from whence he left suddenly Friday of last week. His first move was to call up State's Attorney C. V. Poulin and attempt to reprimand him for not furnishing proper protection as he could continue with his "evangelist" meetings.

The state official immediately notified Mr. Taylor not to proceed with his meetings and warned him if he persisted, a warrant would be issued for his arrest.

State's Attorney Poulin conferred with Gov. Gates yesterday afternoon and the state's chief executive said he understood the situation just as Mr. Taylor explained it and authorized the Rutland county official to take such steps as he deemed necessary to put a stop to the utterance of objectionable remarks made by Mr. Taylor.

THE TONQUA BEAN.

The Real Source of the Perfume Known as "New Mown Hay"

"There is a witchery about the smell of new-mown hay that appeals to human kind of high as well as low degree"—writes Edward Albee in a recent number of the Bulletin of the Pan American Union, Washington, D. C. "There seems to be a tendency to revert to the primitive and bucolic in most of us, however, effete and blasé our tastes may have become, and the fragrance of the fields gratifies the olfactory nerves of prince and pauper, of scullery maid as well as the pampered social butterfly whose more or less remote ancestors doubtless breathed in the perfume as it rose from the dew-covered, tender grass they moved with shining blade and gathered with their own strong arms. The attraction of the perfume has lingered even through many generations."

New-mown hay, however, is not always available, so the art of the perfumer has been called upon to gratify the sense of smell which longs for this particular aroma, and "new-mown hay" has been added to the varied "perfumes of Arabia" used as toilet accessories in liquid form by the devotees of fashion. Perfumes, however, like many other things, are not always what they seem. Grass, freshly cut or otherwise, has had nothing to do with the production of the sweet-scented liquid labeled "new-mown hay." The source of the essence is really a bean. Not the prosaic, edible bean of our vegetable gardens, but a bean that grows in that section of the world where once El Dorado, the "Gilded One," was thought to rule in glittering splendor; that fabled land in the fruitless quest of which so many daring, gold-loving adventurers spent money, time, and even lives most lavishly. It is known as the Tonqua or Konkka bean, and its habitat is to be found in the tropical countries of South America, chiefly in the valleys of the Orinoco, Cauca, and Cuchivero rivers in Venezuela and certain sections of Colombia and Brazil.

The bean is the seed of Dipteris odorata, a tree belonging to the leguminosae or pulse family. The genus comprises about 8 species, all large trees, to be found in the forests of the countries named and having no representative in northern localities. The Tonqua-bean tree in some cases reaches a height of 60 feet with a trunk as much as 3 feet in diameter; it has pinnate leaves and large panicles of flowers, which are succeeded by a pod containing a single seed. The pods are about two inches long, almost shaped, and very thick; the seed is about an inch long and shaped like a large kidney bean; it has a wrinkled skin of shiny black color when ready for the market.

The odor, which is remarkably strong, resembles that of sweet clover or new-mown hay, and is due to the presence of coumarin, a crystallizable, volatile, neutral substance which is soluble in alcohol or ether and somewhat so in boiling water, from which it crystallizes on cooling. The beans are often frosted with crystals of this substance, giving them the appearance of being sugar-coated.

In Venezuela the tree is known as sarapua, and the men engaged in the collection of the beans are called sarapuas. These collectors in Venezuela and Colombia usually set out for the forests in February, when the fruit begins to ripen. They are up the rivers in canoes or skiffs by the hundreds, stopping wherever the trees are plentiful, and when the fruit begins to fall get busy. The pods are gathered and taken to some open space where sun-dried and the beans extracted and then spread out to dry. When thoroughly dried they are loaded into the boats and transported to Ciudad Bolivar, or some other convenient port, where they are sold to the exporting merchants. How they go through a process of crystallization by being steeped in strong rum or alcohol for about 24 hours, and then again dried. It is the drying process which causes the shiny white crystals to appear on the surface, and which causes the beans to shrink and give them their wrinkled appearance.

The United States imported 783,888 pounds of these beans, valued at $1,140,400. They lend their fragrance to "bright yellow or deep red. Among those whose waters become milky before storms are certain wells near Lakeville, in Scott county, and the most pronounced examples of discoloration are in the vicinity of Waterville, in Le Sueur county. The milkiness is due to silt or clay, and the yellow and red colors to fine particles of iron oxide.

"Blowing" and "sucking" are common phenomena in this region, not only in drilled wells but also in dug and bored wells. In the bored wells the air passes in and out through openings in the curb, occasionally with considerable force. Often the whistling of the escaping air is loud enough to be heard for several rods. In some wells in other parts of the country the current is strong enough to operate a whistle that can be heard at a distance of a mile. According to the statements of local drillers, the phenomenon is confined to uncased wells. When the wind is from the south the air is expelled with a whistling sound; when it is from the north it is drawn in. Poisonous gas is sometimes given off with the expelled air, occasionally producing fatal results. In winter, when the wind is north, freezing occurs to a depth of 80 feet, notwithstanding attempts to prevent it by coverings. In Water-Supply paper 256 the geological survey describes and comments on the different methods in use to prevent freezing of wells, and gives a detailed account of the geology and underground waters of southern Minnesota.

Vegetable and Flower Beds.
I have stoutly maintained that from the appearance standpoint I have a right to mix my plantings of vegetables and flowers if I like. A garden of vegetables is a beautiful thing, if it is a good garden. The tendrils of the pea that is sweet to the taste are as daintily clinging, and its flowers are but less conspicuous than those of the pea that is wholly ornamental. Few plants in the flower border produce foliage so delicately cut as that of the carrot. Yellow beans are handsome as they hang from well-grown plants, and a field of celery is a pleasing sight. Tomato plants, hung with red fruits, are brilliantly decorative; and what exotic even approaches the stately, tropical beauty of corn. What sight in any flower garden surpasses that corn as the breeze of a summer day plays over it?—J. Horace McFarland in the Country Magazine for July.
